Using my CBM along with the B.P.I. bookkeeping program, I can make 450 to 500 entries resulting in 25 pages of information. These reports include disbursements, payroll register, trial balances, P & L, and balance sheets. And my CBM can do all this in about 2 hours."

NUMBER 1 BY ALL ACCOUNTS.

As a professional accountant you're in a position to know that the use of computers has become more than just a business trend. Computers have become business necessities. Competition and bottom-line profits demand it.

As more of your clients computerize their services the more you will be called upon to audit in a computerized environment. As such, you practically have a professional mandate to know computers. For your clients' sake. And yours.

However, there's no need to worry. There's a microcomputer on the market that was built to serve the professional accountant in the best way possible. It's called the CBM microcomputer. And whether you use it in-house or in-practice, we think you'll find it to be both a cost saver and a revenue maker. You couldn't ask for a better combination than that.

Because the CBM microcomputer is a completely integrated computer system it allows you to use it for both word and data processing. And that's a good electronic marriage. Especially if you're looking to simplify the preparations of financial statements, general ledgers, corporate tax returns, forecasting analyses or dividend vs. bonus calculations. Copy and calculations can be revised and updated by means of simple commands from the keyboard. Within seconds. And without wasting a single sheet of paper.

In-house you can rely on the CBM to take much of the drudgery out of internal office procedures. Like looking after accounts receivable, time and disbursement accounting, standard form letters and payroll. And a whole lot more. For a lot less than you think.

TO AN ACCOUNTANT, IT'S A WISE INVESTMENT.

If you or your firm is in the market for a dependable, easy-to-use and affordable microcomputer, the CBM is a very logical choice. Think about it. Besides having a better run office you're going to have a better run for your money. And because you're able to service your client's accounts more quickly and accurately you'll find yourself able to take on new business. Now that's smart thinking.
